Location

Penzance is a town, civil parish and port in Cornwall. It is the most westerly major town in Cornwall. The promenade is the only Victorian promenade in Cornwall and one of the 'jewels in the crown' for Penzance. There is great history and folklore to discover, for example many years ago when the area between Marazion and Penzance was mostly marshland, people would try to avoid the Eastern Green because of the "White Lady" ghost, and at the bottom of Quay Street next to the harbour is the Dolphin Inn which is said to have 3 ghosts.

Penzance was also the birthplace of the chemist Sir Humphry Davy who made many discoveries but who is possibly best known as the inventor of the Miner's Safety Lamp, or Davy lamp.

The promenade has undergone some major refurbishment over the last 18 months and is popular with roller skaters, walkers, joggers and families.
